Free workshop offers youth rocket building

CURTIS—The UNL Extension in Frontier County will be hosting a model rocket workshop aimed to help the youth of the surrounding area build and prepare rockets for local county fairs. Each session, June 18, 19 and 21, will take place at the Nebraska College of Technical Agriculture campus in Curtis and offers a hands-on experience for youth to gain knowledge on how to put a model rocket together. The organization is offering the workshop free of charge for area youths.—reported in the Frontier County Enterprise.

Arnold teen keeps racing in the family

ARNOLD—An Arnold teen, Brady Weinman, is keeping racing in the family when he begins his racing career at the Lincoln County Raceway in North Platte. His grandfather, Ed Milne, took over as the promoter of the raceway and his mother, Tammy, and sister, Ashton, help at the track each race night. Weinman decided to begin racing by choosing the number 22W for his car, which has been in the family for years. His father, Darren, raced with the number since 1989 and currently uses it in the Sandhills Open Road Challenge. Other family members who have raced at the raceway include his grandfather Milne and an uncle, Dean Weinman.—reported in the Arnold Sentinel.

Legion officer relates to younger generation

CALLAWAY—Legionnaire Doug Boldt recently related history of the turbulent 1960s to the Callaway High School sophomore history class, a generation where those events are only stories. Boldt gave insight on the Vietnam War and protests of the times through the eyes of a naval veteran who served two tours aboard ships supporting the war. He also answered questions as he reminisced about his time as a sailor and how the nation responded to the war.—reported in the Callaway Courier.
