Gothenburg junior high athletes among top in state, nation.

Across most of the state, junior high track athletes only get noticed by what Jim Clark calls “junkies.”

But a state championship meet in Gothenburg over the weekend may have opened some additional eyes to the upcoming talent of young Nebraska athletes.

The Nebraska Championship for track and field participants in seventh and eighth grades brought competitors from 56 different schools across the state.

“Response was amazing,” said Clark, meet organizer. “There’s no question this will become an annual event.”

With the state’s top 16 performances matched against each other, competition was fierce, Clark said. It also helped push some individuals to improve.

At the weekend competition, 65 performances ranked in the top 25 nationally, including three youngsters who hold the top spots in their events.

In the boys discus, Jake Bartling of Elm Creek threw 141 feet even. That's the longest distance recorded by a junior high competitor in the nation.

On the girls side, Audrey Malone of Fillmore Central ran the 200-meter hurdles in 30.2 seconds to take over the No. 1 spot nationally in that event.

And Gothenburg's own Tiani Reeves, who has earned All-America honors through her Junior Olympics competitions, posted the best 400-meter time at 57.75 seconds.

"We've always known we had those nationally ranked kids in Nebraska," Clark said. "This meet allows us to spotlight them and give them the recognition they deserve."

Individual results follow. National Top 25 ranking follows height/distance/time. An asterisk indicates national ranking with a previous better performance.
