Swede mat men give their all at home meet.

If just one or two individual matches had gone Gothenburg's way in duals against Ainsworth and North Platte St. Pat's, the Swedes would have captured the title in their own meet on Friday.

As it was, though, the lucky breaks didn't come where they needed to and the Swedes finished third at the Gothenburg Invite.

"We put ourselves in a position to win the tournament," said coach Eric Manstedt, "and we did it with seven underclassmen and five upperclassmen. For the most part I thought we wrestled really well."

The Swedes won duals against Holdrege, Broken Bow and High Plains. In their matchups with Ainsworth and St. Pat's, the score was so tight it could have gone either way with one more Gothenburg win.

The Bulldogs finished 5-0 to take top honors.

"We've lost to Ainsworth three years in a row," Manstedt said. "I have pretty high respect for Ainsworth as a program. To be that close is pretty good for our team.”

The Swedes soundly defeated Holdrege in the first round and slipped past Broken Bow in the second round after heavyweight Dane Ehlers pinned Tanner Jackson in the final match.

The Swedes got six wins—four by pin—over Ainsworth and had a shot to beat the Bulldogs with Mitch Spiegel at 103 pounds in the final weight class of the dual with the score at 36-33.

Keaton Gracey put Spiegel to his back once during the match but Spiegel fought him off.

Spiegel, a sophomore, avoided a pin but couldn't overcome Gracey, falling 6-2 and the Swedes fell 39-33 in the dual.

“We can't hang the whole dual on Mitch just because it was the last match,” Manstedt said. “There were other matches that certainly could have made the difference.”

In fact, the coach said, had freshman Cody Cooper not earned a big pin over Brandon Clark at 215 pounds, the Swedes would not have even been close.

“That's just the way it goes sometimes,” Manstedt said.

A similar situation happened against St. Pat's as the Swedes suffered pins in the final two weight classes.

“St. Pat’s has their patented move that they always do,” Manstedt said of the Irish tendency to get into a front headlock. “We prepared for it last week but still ended up getting caught. We lost four matches to them that we should not have lost.”

St. Pat’s beat Gothenburg 39-31.

In all, the Swedes earned nine medals including two weight class championships.

Tanner Schwanz (119) and Justin Larson (125) both earned gold medals.

Spiegel and Kyle Demoret (160) placed second while Chris Hyde (135), Alex McClement (145), Trent Good (152), Cameron Frazho (171) and Dane Ehlers (285) were third.

“This meet showed us where we still need some mental work,” Manstedt said. “At this point in the season, 90% or more of what we need to take care of is mental.”

With his young team in the hunt every week, Manstedt is encouraged the boys are still moving toward their goal of earning a state medal.

Only two varsity meets remain before the B-4 district.

This week the Swedes travel to Hastings on Saturday, the final invite before the Southwest Conference meet at Valentine on Feb. 6.

“Every goal points toward qualifying for state,” Manstedt said. “We are still firmly focused on that.”
