Roughly two and a half lots of land adjacent to Brady's existing fire hall provide a prime location for a new building.

The Brady Rural Fire District board has reached an agreement with Patty Egenberger, who owns the land just east of the fire hall on Commercial Street.

Rural fire board member Jim Lydic told the Brady village board of trustees that an offer of $20,000 for the land has been made and accepted.

"In the past, the village has owned the property and we, as the rural fire board, have done the rest," Lydic said.

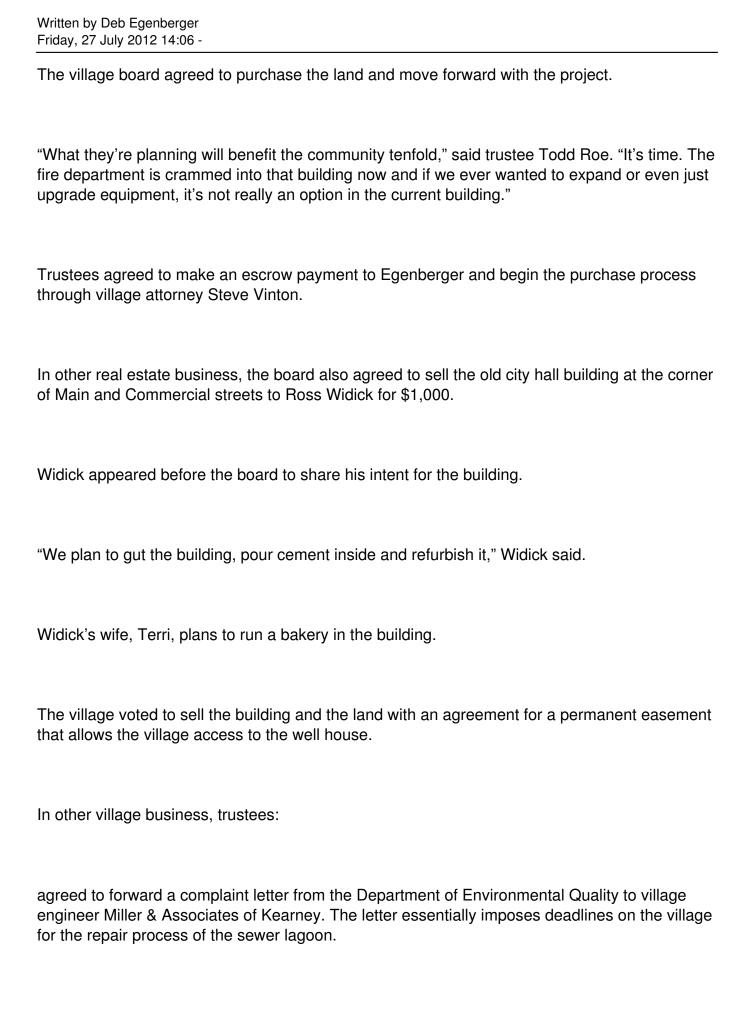

Preliminary plans have already been drawn up for a new building.

During the regular monthly trustee meeting July 16, rural fire board member Ray Blede told the village board that the land is an ideal spot because it is next to the current facility.

"We originally hoped to connect the new and the old but we're not going to be able to do that because of a gas line running through there," Blede said.

Still, he said, a plan to build the new fire hall into the side of the hill could provide a public tornado shelter for the village.

"We've been working at this for three years or more," Blede said. "We really want to get something going."

"I think DEQ just wants to make sure we're acting on the original complaint," said village chairman Jeff Miller. "Reed Miller has been in constant contact with them about this."

A special meeting including a public hearing and information session was scheduled Tuesday night. Full coverage of that meeting will be published in next week's issue of The Times.

discussed water usage and billing complaints during the public comment period with lot owner Tommy Palmer and resident/businessman Jack Mann.

Palmer questioned his monthly water billing of $130 for a lot at the east end of River Street where he grows alfalfa. Mann disputed the difference between his residential bill and the water cost for the Get-N-Go.

"I know I use way more water at my residence than I ever do at the store," Mann said.

Roe told both he sympathized with their concerns and explained the only fair way to bill water usage will come when meters are installed on every property.

granted extended alcohol sale hours until 2 a.m. for the Hitchin' Post during Brady Days on Aug. 4 and 5.

approved a special designated liquor license for the Brady Volunteer Fire Department for their street dance during Brady Days on Aug. 4.

reviewed a new contract for law enforcement services with the Lincoln County Sheriff's Department. The current contract, which expires Oct. 1, provides for 50 hours of patrol time per month for an annual cost of $13,000.

Chairman Miller suggested the board consider reducing the hours to 25 monthly.

The board plans to discuss the contract again in August, giving residents time to voice their opinions.

voted to vacate a portion of Short Street and the alley that connects Short to River Street with a permanent easement to the village for utilities. The action allows Jason Hamilton, new home owner at 208 S. Vine, to maintain a fence that extends past the property line.

authorized installation of a stop sign on the south side of the intersection of Poplar and Market streets, as requested by trustee Lynn Herrick. The intersection was previously a three-way stop.
